The United Nations announced tonight that the cease-fire ap-peared to be holding. Senior UN officials said reports indicated that at 19.45 GMT "all was quiet throughout the island and ... the cease-fire is holding."

In London, Foreign Secretary James Callaghan announced that Britain, Turkey and Greece would begin talks about the Cyprus situation in Geneva later this week. He told a crowded press coo-ference that Turkish forces, reinforced during the night by additional troops, tanks and artillery, had seized all of the port town of Kyrenia and all of Kyrenia Province by the time the cease-fire went into effect.

Mr. Ecevit said that a "void of political authority on Cyprus" will make it extremely difficult to enforce a cease-fire by the Greek Cypriots. He said that Turkish forces had won all of their objectives in three days of fighting and said that Kyrenia now would remain Turkish, providing a permaneot outlet to the sea for the Turkish community on Cyprus. "The Turkish military presence oo the island is irreversibly estabtask force view was that the flood of foreign medical eraduates must be reduced "In the interest of the quality of medical education and care" in the United States.

List of Becommendations The task force recommended

· A standard qualifying examination should be developed and given to graduates of U.S. and foreign schools alike before they are admitted to an internship or residency. The foreign graduates now take a special screening exam, but medical educators feel that it is not tough enough.

· The number of foreign medical graduates given internships or residencies should be limited and the total number of such jobs available each year should exceed only slightly the number of graduates each year from U.S.

• A pilot project should be started—with preference given to U.S. citizens—to learn to give foreign medical graduates some U.S. undergraduate-level learning experiences to correct their "defects," and bring them to the level of competence generally reached by U.S. graduates.

· Measures should be taken to reduce the "large but unknown" number of foreign graduates now giving unsupervised medical care in state hospitals and many other institutions, although they have not qualified for state licenses.

· New methods should be developed to provide the patient services given in many hospitals foreign-trained interns and · Adequate funding should be provided to enlarge student bodies in U.S. medical schools. But other health workers, too, must be trained to give much of the care that the foreign-trained interns and residents are giving.

been allowed back, out of several hundred who applied. This year, according to a wellplaced source, nuly one applica-tion has been granted. Soviet policy is thought to have hardened late last year, when newspaper articles in Moscow spelled out clearly that those who chose to emigrate and give up their Soviet citizenship could have no hope of returning. Most observers think a change heart by Moscow is unlikely. If the Kremlin were to guarantee emigrants the right to change their minds and return, the result would be a surge in applications to leave by Soviet Jews who are now hesitant about making a definitive decision. The Jews say that 90 per cent of the Soviet immigrants in Israel would secretly like to go home, but Israeli officials dispute this and point out that of the 90,000 from all walks of life who have gone to Israel from the Soviet Union, the proportion of those who have wanted to return is

Austrian officials now admit that they no longer have an accurate record of how many Jews are in Vienna. Since the Austrian Consulate in Israel stopped issuing visas to the returnee about a year ago, many have taken advantage of lax border controls to come here illegally. The Jews themselves say that their numbers have grown to more than 1,000. Vienna wel-fare authorities, who have most contact with the group, put the figure at between 300 and 400, including about 30 or 40 children. They are allowed to seek work, although most have no docu-ments at all now that their sixmonth Israeli travel documents have expired.

The Austrian government considers them to be Israeli citizens and allows them to stay here only while they wait for an an-swer from the Soviet Consulate to their visa applications.

But the policy is tolerant. Austrian officials say that while slim hopes remain of solving the problem with the Kremlin, the outlook is unpromising. Chancellor Bruno Kreisky raised the matter with Premier Alexei Kosygin last year, apparently without result.

Some of the returnees may eventually accept life here and about 30 have gone a second time to Israel. But for the majority who want to go back, especially those with families in the Soviet Union, the future looks bleaker than ever.

Tha commander of British forces on Cyprus announced to-day that four British warships and a tanker will sail to the northern Cyprus coast early tomorrow to try to rescue hun-dreds of British and other nationals stranded at Kyrenia since Saturday.

Although most of the 260 persons evacuated to England were British, some of them were Austrians, Canadians, Frenchmen and Germans. Several leveled looting and brutality charges against Cyprus's Greek-officered National Guard. A newlywed Turkish Cypriot couple. Mehmet and Ayshe Besim, who live in London and wars honeymorning in Limassol, said that they had seen the bodies of women and children in the streets and alleged that members of the National Guard had plundered all the houses in the Turkish quarter. Some of the houses had been set on fire, they said. Mr. Besim, 26, a civil servant, said: "Greek [Cypriot] guards were shooting indiscriminately. They didn't seem to care who they hit."

Another evacuee, Kesban Der-vish, 15, sobbed as she described the killing of her uncle and the wounding of his family by mortar fire which hit a house where the National Guard was holding them captive. Through an interpreter, the girl said that she saw a woman raped by National Guard soldiers in the house yesterday and then shot in the head. A British serviceman's wife, who declined to be identified, accused National Guard members and avoid recommending a case. that cannot win conviction in a Senate trial On other charges, he said the committee staff did not try to determine whether abuses of power allegedly committed by Mr. Nixon and his aides were not the sustamery practice in prior administrations. He also raised what he termed the serious question whether Mr. Nixon's tax problems amount to grounds for imperchment. Income tax payments, he said, are not official conduct and therefore, should not be considered impeachable

In his brief, Mr. Garrison urged committee members to take on the part of a "student prosecutor".

'A Reasonable View' Referring to Mr. Doar's argument that the President's standing as a taxpayer was unique because of his high office, Mr. Garrison said, "The more reasonable riew would seem to be, however, that private conduct is not automatically transformed into an 'abuse of official power,' in the case of a President, simply because of the attitude which other persons may entertain toward the presidency." Mr. Gerrison's argument that the case for impeachment was based on inferences was rejected by some members who said the President's refusal to supply tapes end documents subpostned by the committee accounted for whatever gaps may exist in the evidence, according to committee

The Republican advocate likened the President's claim of executive privilege to withhold sub-poenced evidence to the Fifth Amendment's guarantee against self-incrimination.

Mr. Gerrison argued that inroking the Fifth Amendment is not an indication of guilt, and neither should the invocation of executive privilege be so con-struct. Mr. Garrison charged that Mr. Door constructed his case by parting "adverse interence on adverse interence."

On Friday, Mr. Doar was said by a Democratic committeeman to have made the case that "reasomable men acting reasonably would find the President guilty."

Cease-Fire in Cyprus

It was a short war. At least, one is entitled to hope so, although cease-fires can be delicate oulwarks against bloodshed, especially under conditions as complex as those prevailing in Cyprus. The efforts of the United States and Great Britain to end the fighting were intense: The Soviet Union at least held hands off, and the worst that can be said about the powers in this struggle is that they failed to prevent an explosion of wrath which must have continuing consequences.

If the cease-fire holds, the most urgent need of diplomacy is to seek to insure that Cyprus does not again become a center of world crisis and peril. And that, in the light of some 20 years of tension, as well as the conflicting aspirations of Greeks and Turks on mainland and island, will not be easy.

The mainland Greeks and many of the Greek Cypriots want union with Greece. The Turks-in Ankara, certainly, and many in Cyprus, probably-want partition, with Greece and Turkey each taking part of the island. Enosis (union with Greece) of all Cyprus is anathema to Turkey, and even if Athens were to concede the kind of "double Enosis" Turkey wants, it would probably be a political and economic monstrosity, of the kind that has plagued so many lands which sought to reconcile ethnicism with a stub-

A return to an independent Cyprus seems to be the best guarantee of a reasonable degree of peace on the island. But it will obviously not be independence under the National Guard.

Probably some kind of internationally supervised piebiscite, with more effective international support for the results than the Makarios government received, would be the best answer, in theory, at least,

Good theories of government often suffer at the hands of the people who are governed, especially when, as in Cyprus, there is a long background of communal rivalry, and many nations whose conflicting interests focus on the island. Moreover, there has been enough war there to bring sorrow, loss, and anger to many, while the anguish has not been prolonged sufficiently to convince any side of its waste and uselessness.

But then, one has only to look to Indochina, to Ireland and the Middle East to realize that some wars may never convince committed participants of their folly. It seems the role of wisdom is to press for the good theory as opposed to solutions that would enhance bitterness and place a premium on war or terror. Sometimes reason does prevail in human affairs, sometimes it can become a way of life, a viable compromise which is generally acceptable. That is the only hope for Cyprus-as for so many other parts of the world where rabid emotions find vent in violence, under the cloak of high idealism.

Vote of Conscience

As the members of the House Judiciary Committee prepare to vote on the critical issue of impeachment, they have a responafbility to lay aside all other considerations except the claims of conscience. Other than a vote to declare war, this is the most important vote any of them will ever cast.

The atmosphere is inevitably charged with political electricity. Some pressure groups and some constituents are going to be disappointed no matter how a member decides to vote.

Since President Nixon is a Republican, the pressures are inevitably more intense for Republican congressmen and for those conservative Democrats from the Sonth where the President's political strength is greatest. It is difficult to break with a President of one's own party. It is easier and more comfortable to stick with one's friends than to take the unpopular course.

But simply because the Republican party itself is divided and there are pressures both for and against impeachment, a congressman cannot make up his mind by trying to guess the mood of the constituency. As Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., observed the other day, he and hie fellow members will have to be able to explain and defend their votes regardless of which position they take. For that reason if no other, it should be the position they genuinely believe in and can defend with conviction.

Liberal Democrats, however, are not exempt from the responsibility to act disinterestedly even though a pro-impeachment vote probably would be politically safe for most of them. Their duty, too, is to look at the evidence and to transcend parti-

In reality, it is not unduly optimistic to believe that members of the committee and their fellow citizens back home are considering the grave issue of impeachment on its merits. In times of crisis, Americans have shown that they can rise above their private concerns and prejodices and put the interests of their country first. They expect their representatives to study the facts and use their best judgment.

Responsive to that trust, most members of both parties can be counted upon to cast a vote for their country, a vote unaffected by selfish interest or partisan feeling-a vote of conscience.

Recession or Spasm?

good news ont of the latest data on the performance of the national economy is an illnsionary feat worthy of Hondini.

Real gross national product—total output of goods and services, corrected for inflation -declined at an annual rate of 1.2 per cent in the April-June quarter of this year. Having plummeted by 7 per cent in the January-March quarter, a bigger drop than had been announced earlier, real GNP has now declined by more than 8 per cent.

At the same time, inflation continues to boil. The overall price index that is used to "deflate" GNP rose at an annual rate of 8.8 per cent in the second quarter, following a 12.3 per cent rate of increase in the first quarter, also worse than previously reported.

Nevertheless, administration spokesmen insist, the economy is looking better. Real output declined much less in the second than in the first quarter, and the overall price index rose less rapidly. Industrial production dropped less than in earlier recessions, nor has unemployment increased as much. Total employment actually advanced. In fact, said Secretary of Commerce Dent, there is no recession at all, despite the two successive quarters of decline in real GNP, but only an "energy-related spasm."

There is no point in playing semantic games over whether the economy is or is not technically in something called a "recession." a term which the private but quasi-official scorekeeper, the National Bureau of Research, has never been willing to define in

The administration's ability to squeeze a way that would let anybody but itself keep score. What matters is that the American economy is in a weakened condition resulting from more than the rise in oil prices.

> Inflation, now intensified by an acceleration of wage increases, shows little evidence of slowing down. Consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 12 per cent in June; the annual rate of increase in the consumer price index for the first half of 1974 has been 12.6 per cent. Wholesale prices have climbed at the astonishing annual rate of 18.3 per cent in the first six months of this

In evaluating the administration's present blithe view of the price outlook, one might look back at the 1973 economic report of the President, in which Mr. Nixon proclaimed the goal of "getting the rate of inflation down to 2 1/2 per cent nr less by the end of 1973."

Once again, this year, the President has made a bold proclamation: There will be no recession, he has said, as though that declaration were itself a policy or a program.

At best, the economy appears headed for very sluggish growth in the months ahead. Demand is weak; GNP would already have fallen still further had it not been for a huge involuntary accumulation of inventories. Housing is in a deep recession. Money rates are astronomically high. The securities markets are depressed.

White House cheerleading is a pitiful substitute for genuine national economic policymaking and leadership. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

International Opinion

Europe and Cyprus

The damage caused by the open conflict between Greeks and Turks over Cyprus is considerable and its complete repsir will undoubtedly take a long time. In both countries nationalistic emotions have been aroused, and it has been demonstrated that even common membership of NATO is not of itself sufficient to banish the specter of military confrontation. The primary need now is for restraint on the part of the Turks. not only in regard to their military actions on the island itself, but also with respect to their demands. Should Ankara seek to effect a displacement of equilibrium in its own favor (and perhaps derive advantage in the dispute over Aegean oil), it could well prove difficult to defuse the situation. -From the Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich).

'The Manifest Injury'

By Anthony Lewis

NEW YORK-An admirer of President Nixon, sickened by Watergate but still opposed to impeschment, explained the other "Why bother impeaching him? He has been punished enough by what has happened, and that will be an example to future presidents. It is better to stop now."

If the person of Richard Nizon were the issue that argument would be persuasive. There is no great purpose in merely pursuing him into further disgrace. History will record him for what he

But the issue that faces Congress is not Nixon. The process that finally reaches the stage of Committee this week will decide what kind of government Americans are going to have, two centuries after winning independence. It will decide what kind of country we are.

Awesome List

That large sense of what is at stake is irresistibly conveyed in the Articles of Impeachment proposed by the committee counsel, John Doar, and the supporting findings. Even after all the disclusives of the last two years, the list of things done by this President and his men is awe-

Obstruction of justice, subornstion of perjury, burglary, inter-ference with the Judicial process, illegal wiretapping for political ends, destruction of evidence, use of the tax system to punish enemies, misuse of police and intel-ligence agencies, tax fraud, contempt of Congress: Those are some of the wrongs committedall, as the draft resolution says, to the manifest injury of the confidence of the nation and the great prejudice of the cause of law and justice."

That those things happened is not really in doubt. The question is what Congress should de about them-do to prevent them happening again. Some congressional Republicans, reluctant to impeach, are evidently trying to convince themselves that there us some method short of impeachment. Rep. David W. Dennis, R-Ind., said, "We really ought to be thinking about some remedial

But the remedy already exists. It was written into the Constitution. Failure to use it now necessarily appear to a degree as a condoning of what has happened. If a future president were lawless, would he be put off by the history of a predecessor who survived disclosure of such wrongdoing? Or would he be tempted to think that he could be more effective in the abuse of power?

Deterrence

In maintaining law and order in society, deterrence is a crucial factor. The potential criminal is most effectively deterred by the sense that punishment is likely to be swift and sure. It would not be much of a deterrent if judge or jury refused to enforce existing laws and suggested that hy its counsel deal not with Mixon's policy decisions but with his illegal methods and abuses of trust. The institution of the presidency would hardly be weekened by cleansing it of the corruptions that have sapped public confidence.

It is not just the character of the presidency that these next weeks will define. It is our own character as a people; our values, our sense of legitimacy, our trust. Will that special American reverence for the law survive? Will our wounded respect for in-stitutions be revived, or will we become an altogether cynical people? Will we believe again the possibility of leaderthip -believe that America's consil-

Responsibility

Those are some of the larger questions that may be profoundly affected by the course of im-peachment. Underlying them all is the idea of moral responsibility. "I will not place the blame on subordinates . . ." the President said in his Watergate speech of April 30, 1973. "The man at the top must bear the responsibility." Yet now the man whose per-sonal and political staff was rife with criminality, the man in whose name this country's most pervasive political crimes were committed, says that somehow it had nothing to do with him, ls that to be our standard of responsibility? Standards are the issue in the end-legal and moral national and personal. As the House Judiciary Committee heard John Doar last week, a Nixon supporter waiting outside said: "We elected right to use his judgment on what he should break into." Congress will decide whether that is the kind of country America is to be.

Mediation, yes-Britain, after all, is one of the guarantors of the Cyprus inde-pendence settlement—but interrention, no. And yet Cyprus it a member of the Commonwealth (and a loyal one, too), and despite this the government is being urged from all sides to refrain from committing so much as a single soldier to battle. might be expected, and it was left for Kourad Adenauer in the last volume of his "Erinnerungen" to shed some light on what De Gaulle told him about the veto of Britain.

Adenance wrote copiously on his 1962-1963 meetings with De Gaulle for those were the heady days of Franco-German rapprochement and the signing of the friendship treaty that was later to fade, as De Gaulle would say, as quickly as young girls and roses. But while Aden was in power harmony prevailed on the Rhine, and the discussions were very open.

Fears

One thing Adensuer makes completely clear: Neither he nor De Gaulle thought Britain was ready for Europe. Both feared the British would destroy what they were building, and transform the community into some vast, diluted trading block stretching out as far as America and the Commonwealth

"It is the old English spiel with the Continent," Adensuer wrote, "divide et impers." That, however, was not the message that Macmillan brought to De Gaulle in the two fateful 1962 meetings. According to the British sources, Macmillan pledged Britain to Europe during both these meetings, hinting at Franco-British nuclear cooperation and telling De Gaulle at Rambouillet that Britain wanted to join Europe not only for commercial reasons but for political The Rambouillet meeting in December was only days before Macmillan flew off to Nassau to meet President Kennedy and sign the Polaris agreement that De Gaulle was to use as a pretext for his veto the following month. But it was only a pretext. De Gaulie already had told Mac-millan at Rambouillet before the Nassan agreement that Britain was not ready for Europe. . . Adenatier tells in his mamoires

He listed them: Britain would hurt West Germany's coal industry, the pound was too weak, Britam's special relationship with America was bad for Europe, the Brus mechanism would be strained, the Commonwealth problem was insoluble and half of Britain nemely the Labor party still on-posed joining.

Following the British elections in the mid-1960s, Labor changed its mind, and Harold Wilson soo came to Paris to renew the British membership bld. Wilson's effort fared no better than Macmillan's, and De Gaulle vetoed British a second time at his November, 1967, press conference.

No potential star. shone this time, as Mark Silver did last year, but the general standard was excellent, with several young women and men who might well rise to the heights.

Peter Wright's "Arpege," to music by Boteldien, was specially created for the students at their Covent Garden matinee, and then repeated during their weeks in two suburban theaters—Richmond and Wimbledon. (The Wimbledon engagement replaces the tradi-tional open-air performances in Holland Park, which have been discontinued because of the un-reliability of the weather.) It is a pleasant abstract work showing off the pure classical training of the dancers, without making exorbitant demands on their technique: Lorns Murray and Denise Nunn, alternating in the ballering role, both did extremely well. These two dancers also shone in MacMillan's "Concerto."

But the highlights of the Covent Garden matines were the junior pupils doing English folk dances and the incredibly effective per-formance of Ashton's "Jazz Calender." It's very rare to see English folk dances, in all their variety, performed by attractive young people who really can dance, and the children from the junior school do them with immense vivacity and evident enjoy-ment. "Jazz Calendar," with its sophisticated choreography, hardly seemed a likely work for stu-dents, but Denise Num and a very good-looking tall blond boy called Michael Batchelor even managed to make quite a bit of the sexy Sibley-Nureyev pas da deux; there was a new young comedian to take over Wayne Sleep's antics in the boys ballet

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

ESB Fights Inco Bid

In an effort to forestall a sudden and unwanted take-over bid, top management of ESB Inr., large U.S. maker of batteries, issued its firstquarter report, plus an optimistic statement by its president. The company, once known as Electric Storage Battery, is fighting a tender offer to its stockholders by International Nickel Co. of Canada. ESB reported a 31 per cent gain in first-quarter gales for the fiscal period ended June 30 of $114.2 million, on which earnings rose 35 per cent from the year-ago quarter to $3.5 million, or 63 cents a share. Frederick Port, ESB president, predicts earnings for the full fiscal year of $4 a share, up 13 per cent, based on "appraisal in current economic conditions, the current situation in raw material prices, and results from profit-margin improvement programs under way." International Nickel is offering to buy ESB shares at $28 a share. ESB management opposes the offer.

Egypt Seeks $100-Million Eurologn Egypt's central bank is seeking a $100-millium, nine-year syndicated Eurocurrency loan from a group of banks led by Union de Banques Arabes et Françaises (UBAF). The loan, which will be used by the Egyptian government for general purposes, carries an interest spread of 1.25 points above Eurodollar rates with a commitment fee of $.25 per cent on the undrawn portion. Though there are ample indications that banks generally have been both cutting hack on their Eurocurrency lending activities and charging higher rates for the loans they do make, the charges for this loan are slightly less than those for a previous Egyptian Eurocurrency loan—which carried a one-point spread for the first two years, 1.25 points for the next two years and 1.4375 points for the last five years, representing an average spread of 1.2986, or more than the current loan.

German Car Output Falls 26 %

The short-time working week in the motor industry brought West German car production in June to a new low of 216,376—A 26 per cent drog over June last year adjusted for working days and a 12.2 per cent fall from May. The automobils industry association says car production for the first half fell 14.5 per cent from the year-ago period. Overall vehicle output in the first six months dropped 19.7 per cent to 1.75 million units. Exports fell again in June bringing an 11.1 per cent fall over the first half year. The export share of total production, at 63.7 per cent, is well below the year-earlier first-half figure. Association president Heinrich von Brunn says dismissats may be inevitable if no government help is forthcoming and the situation does not improve in the autumn. Short-time work will then not be enough, he adds. The government has so far declined special help to sectors such as the motor industry particularly hard-hit by the downturn in domestic demand.

U.S. Economy to Get 'Old-Time Religion ... ? NEW YORK, July 22 (IHT). - either sluggish economic growth cial worry swings to unemploy-

Many U.S. government economic policy makers are easting wistful looks back to the go-slow era of the 1950s when the laws of supply and demand seemed to be working and prices actually went down as well as up. Those last years of the Eisenhower period were marked by or outright recession. But inflation rates shrank from modest to minimal, falling from 3.4 per cent in 1956 to 1.7 per cent in 1959. The inflation rate then hovered around 1.5 per cent during the early 1960s as President Kennedy's economists strugtry to get things slowed again, they have turned to what they call "the old-time religion" of restrictive monetary and fiscal policies.

But be and other administration economists consider today's inflation rate so serious that a substantial increase in joblessness must be tolerated in an effort to. cool the price spiral.

If that policy prevails against the obvious political counter-pressures, the outlook is for not just months but years of slow economic growth. Treasury Secretary William Simon, a true behever in the old-time religion, argues that "we must be prepared to stay the long course' to cure inflation. The cure "will take time—years of it," he believes.

Slow growth or no growth is already practically assured for 1974. Real gross national product decimed in the first half of the year at an annual rate of 4.1 per cent. and prospects for the second half are for only sluggish growth. That combination would produce virtually no net growth for the full year.

The big question is whether 1975, too, will look like one of those Eisenhower years. Some private economists predict that it will, on the assumption that the government will stick to restrictive economic policies. But skeptics in and out of government believe the old-time religion may face a kind of crisis of faith around the turn of the

At that point, one insider figures, officials may face this set of economic conditions: growth dragging along at 2 per cent, un-employment close to 6 per cent 100 from 5,2 per cent now 1 and rising, and an inflation rate receding toward 7 per cent from the first quarter's 12.3 per cent. Then there would be pressures for easing up on the restraint." he predicts, as many congressmen, labor leaders and worried

U.S. Is in Slump, Citibank Says

NEW YORK, July 22 (Reuters).—First National City Bank says U.S. gross national product figures for the second quarter show that the economy is "being gripped by a pervasive recession." rather than a temporary slow-COWIL.

Tha bank, in its Economic Week publication, said that while the oil embargo may have caused a deeper decline in the first quarter than would have otherwise taken place, "there is no escaping the extent of the decline in output" in the first half of 1974. Last week the Commerce Department reported that real GNP fell 12 per cent in the second quarter and fell by a revised 7 per cent in the first three months of the year.)

"The U.S. economy has not experienced anything like it ithe GNP decline: since the recession of 1957, 58," Citibank stated.

Consumer Spending Cut The bank said that recession was also apparent in the pattern of hehavior of the major components of real output, and the deepest cuts have taken place in outlays on consumer durables and residential construction. Also, Citihank said, "confrary to the impressions gained from capital spending surveys, soendlog on producer's equipment has also declined in real terms."

And, it sald, there has also been a sizable slowdown in the rate of inventory accumulation.

Citibank said that previous estimates of inventory accumulation were boosted sharply in If that happens, inflation rates of 3 per cent or so will join bluelatest Commerce Department re-visions in GNP estimates for the auede shoes. Edsels and other last three years, which confirmed relies of that hygone era on the "that the official numbers were

N.Y. Stock Prices Show Gain But Trading Volume Declines

NEW YORK, July 22 (IHT).— Prices closed with a small gain in a listless session on the New York Stock Exchange today. The Dow Jones industrial inden rose 2.42 points to 790.36. The index fell 4 points early in the session before recovering.

Advancing issues narrowly outnumbered declines about 705 to 620 after being behind most of the session.

Volume totaled 9,29 million shares compared with 11.08 million on Friday.

Brokers said the market mostly marked time in the absence of stimulating news. They said uncertainty was caused by reports of continued fighting in Cyprus. "Cyprus is a nervous thing." said Alan Shaw, Vice-President at Harris Upham, "but it isn't all

Some brokers said many traders sat on the sidelines awaiting some positive sign that the Federal Reserve has eased controls on interest rates.

IBM, which had been off 3 points at one time, finished with a ne gain of 2 1, 8 to 219 7/8, Newmont Mining spurted 1 5.8 to 27. It reported second-quarter per-share earnings twice that of a year earlier.

Exxon, another strong feature, rose 21,2 to 733,4. After the market closed Friday, it came in with sharply higher earnings for the second quarter and first half.

Mountain Fuel Supply jumped 4 1 4 to 59, and brought to 12 points the gain in the stock the lest two sessions.

Mountain Fuel said last week it was advised by the Utah Public Service Commission that the revenues derived from its oil operations will not have to be included in its natural gas utility accounts for rate-making purposes.

Throughout this period we have striven to serve faithfully the entire customer spectrum from the single individual to the giant corporation. We have endeavoured to make a real and lasting contribution to the development of a healthy economic society both domestically and internationally.

With the objective in mind of "making our 40th Anoiversary more meaningful by bringing greater happiness and prosperity to future geoerations" as a guideline, we have improved customer service at home and shroad, consolidated management, and strengthened the managerial structure.

Internationally, we have opened a new branch in Brussels during the last term. In Hong Kong and various cities of Brazil, Iran, Indonesia, and the Philippines, we have established financing or leasing companies as joint ventures with foreign financial institutions, and in some cases engaged in capital participation. Through our global network we have provided comprehensive financial services, including medium- and long-term loans.

Domestically, we have strengthened the marketing structure and reformed the administrative organisation to improve service and efficiency. In the past three years, the volume of husiness has increased 33 percent and the number of employees only 11 percent. We extend heartfelt gratitude to all our foreign correspondeot banks, customers, and shareholders who have supported us. To continue to meet fully the ever increasing needs of our customers and society in fi general, we are determined to spare no effort in the months and years ahead.

THE RECOGNITIONS. By William Goddis. Berd Aron Books. 1021 pp. $2.55.

Reviewed by Tony Tanner

WILLIAM GADDISS "The live in "fragments" and amore Recognitions", received intile "palimpsests" is ethoed intention when it first appeared Wyatt's diagnosis: "Separatene attention when it first appeared in 1955, perhaps because it seemed so inaccessible. It is certainly a complex structure, rather like the monastery that figures near the beginning and the end of the book, with turreted walls. parapets, crenelations, machicolations, bartizans, a harrowing variety of domes and spires in staggering Romanesque, Byzan tioe effuigence, and Gothle run riot in mullioned windows, with dow tracings, and an immense rose window whose foliations were so elaborate that it was never furnished with glass."

But if at times we feel lost, displaced, dispriented as we more through the complicated edifice of the book (just re-issued in -paperback by Avon Books), we are only experiencing analogically a lostness that is felt in varying ways by all the characters in the book. In an age of unbelief and uncertainty, all stable, cohering architectures become problematical, and Gaddis is well aware of the implications of the metaphor.

The book ends with the literal collapse of a cathedral, and throughout Gaddis has been giving us a kind of topography of the disintegrations of the modern world. However, the novel itself is a massive act of integration. When we read, if we can have the experience described by one of the characters when he looking at a Picasso, we find everything was freed into one recognitionally, really freed into reality." The church falls, the book stands.

It is a novel about forgery of all kinds and all the ambiguities involved in the concept of fimitation." The main character. Wyatt Gwayon, abandons the idea of priesthood to become an artist, then gives up "that romantic disease originality." to become a dedicated copier of Flemish old masters his skill which for him is initially applied as an act of selfless reverence, involves him with purely mercenary forgers for whom art values are indistinguishable from commodity ralues. This confusion between copying as a religious act of rec-ognition and the forging of counterfeit creations for manipnlative and exploitative purposes is central to the book. It is a confusion which results not only in forged money, faked pictures, plagiarized books, but also comterfeit emotions, pseudo beliefs, imitated speech synthesized Life becomes a sort of ongoing carnival of clutter. filling up with stuff at the same time as it seems to be coming apart and falling to bits. Stanley, snother would be genuine artist in the book, has a terror of "expendability... Everything wore out... What was more, he lived in a land where everything was calculated to wear out." He spends anxious hours watching a crack in his ceiling, a true American entropologist, and a student of the growing gaps and fissures in that's what went wrong ... Ever thing withholding uself fru everything else." In this wor of expendable fragments as movement without meaning s whole: Odyasey without Ulyases everything is inverted and o can be "engulied in emptines and "cluttered with separation So the two potentially genui artists in the book work for E nificance in the nihilation of t available signs and seek author ticity in negation.

Any attempted summary character and incident would both impossible and inapprop ate. To talk of the characte and their language, and t events which together they copose and decompose, as if the were stable entities, is mislead? in such a world. It is here the Gaddis shows some of his me original handling of the non form. We are now familiar to the realization that to a lar extent we are constituted "subjects" by the language is which we are born, composed, a large extent, by the existi courses. If the society produ ing that discourse is based on t exchange of false "goods." th it is possible to regard both t people of that society and th speech as being in some ways species of debased currency.

To a varying extent, this how Gaddis depicts the figur and speech of his world so th many characters are little in than metamorphosing surfac-bits of speech habits, copies pastiches. This extends even the most simple phrase so th for example, when we first re of a person experiencing a "ser of something lost," we register, as an authentic emotion unic to that individual. But wase." keep encountering the phrase many other individuals we brito sense that emotions can circ late like cliches and sensati change hands like worn-do

Although the National League has not embarked on any open policy of "aggression" to win, Berra did show some leaning in that direction this week. He chose eight pitchers, but did not include Tommy John of the Los Angeles Dodgers, who had a 13-and-3 won-lost record at the time and

Karl Is Victor In Golf Playoff

ENDICOTT, N.Y., July 22 (UPI)—Richie Karl, playing on the course that was his childhood playground, sank a 35-foot birdle putt on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff yesterday to heat Bruce Crampton for the $150,000 D.C. Open.

A part-time member of the pro golf tour who had failed to qual-ify for three of the last four events he tried to enter. Karl appeared to have lost his bld for his first tournament victory when he blew a six-stroke lead on the final nine.

Crampton, meanwhile, turned in a flawless round of 5-under-par 66 to complete his 72 holes at 11-under 273. Karl had a 68 for the final 18 holes on the En Joie Golf Club course. NFL Outlook Is Poor

By Parton Keese

NEW YORK, July 22 (NYT1.-Baron Marcel Bich of France, who vowed in 1970 that he would never return for the America's Cup, has sent his boat to Newport, R.I., and will arrive there in August for the elimination trials with Australia.

The winner will meet the U.S. defender starting Sept. 10 for the France, which lost to Australia in the 1970 trials, began huilding a new aluminum 12-meter yacht for this year's challenge, but changed his plan and will chal-lenge with the same wooden craft.

France I, the defeated 1970 entry, sank in the Atlantic earlier year, stayed there for two months and then was raised and "dried out" for her new challenge.

Paul Elystrom of Denmark, considered the finest match-racing sailor in the world, was bired by Bich to skipper the French boat, along with a Scandivian crew, hut had a falling out with Bich and was released along with

Not Optimistic

It has not been a very good year for the French as far as the America's Cup is concerned. Though Bich, the millionaire ball-point pen manufacturer. went out and acquired the best available sailors in France, trained them rigorously in the Mediterranean and remodeled his boat, he is the first to admit that his chances of winning are not

"This time it is mostly for the experience," said Bruno Birh, one of the baron's 10 children and the spokesman for the French effort. "Our chances ere reduced by not having a new boat, but if we fail, we still will have furthered our knowledge for the next challenge in "77 or "78."

When France I arrives in Newport sometime this week, there will be a rush of observers to see how she's changed. Most, if not all, will probably remark: "Why, she's no different than the last time." and they'll he correct. Except for a sharper line from bow to keel hidden under water and new masts and sails, France I is, for all practical purposes, the same boat.

However, a 12-meter yacht made of wood has to be somewhat different after spending two months at the bottom of the sea. "It was stupid," said François Bich, another son and the only member of the family serving on the crew, in speaking of the sinking. "There were only two men aboard her while she was being towed: she was weighted down with masts and spars so that when the water got rough, she couldn't respond the way she was designed to, took on water and

Shortly after a four-hour session yesterday with federal mediator James Scearce, a spokesman for the owners said members of their Management Council Bargaining Unit "will not be available for further meetings unless and until the players' association comes forth with the proposals it promised and failed to submit for the last three days."

That deflated any optimism that had been built because the two sides had met with Scearce on Friday, Saturday and yesterday in the deserted Labor Department building:

Scearce scheduled a meeting for today but acknowledged that no progress had been made "toward consummating an agree-ment" to end the 22-day-old strike. The owners said they would have a representative available "when, as and if" any new proposals are submitted by the union.

The new impasse came with the first exhibition between two NFL teams approaching—the Hall of Pame game between the St. Louis Cardinals and Buffalo Bills at Canton. Ohio, Saturday. While some people consider Menis a breakthrough in supermarket shopping, there are others take the thrill out of grocery-huying. My friend Milton Wallach was highly critical of the Safeway propossi. The thing

Buchwald going to a supermarket is that it was like going to a casino in Las Vegas. The big gamble was to get out of the store before they changed the price oo you. You only had a half hour to do it, and the excitement for me was running down the aisles pushing my cart, with a stockboy chasing after me trying to stamp my goods with a new price before I got to the checkout counter."

Wallach, who has spent a lot of time in supermarkets, said that in recent mooths there have heen so many prices on food packages you could hardly read

"I would go into the store and ask the clerk. Where are the baked beans you advertised for 40 cents? He would reply. Oh. those must be the ooes we raised to 55 cents this morning. They marked down from 62 cents, 57 cents and 45 cents last week. You better get them right away because I think they're going up to 70 cents in 10 min-

In his observations, Wallach discovered that in every supermarket the manager makes his own decisioo on what to charge for an iteo. "I was in one store and I saw a box of crackers with 65 cents stamped on them. "The manager happened to walk by and saw one of his clerks perspiring. 'Is it hot out!' he asked the boy.

Every store, says Wallach, has a different method of raising prices. "Some send their stock boys down the aisles every 15 minutes, stamping everything they can see. Others have their stampers waiting at key points, and as soon as you pass they start stamping everything in your basket. A few get carried away. In one store I was wearing white shoes and one of the lads had stamped $2.50, $4.50 and $6.50 on them. I complained to the manager, who apologized and gave me a free can of white shoe cleaner which was marked 67 cents, 89 cents and $1.50."

Occasionally, Wallach says, there is a slip-up and he'll find a package that doesn't have a price on it at all. "Last week I was in a supermarket and I found a box of blueberries that some price stamper had missed. I asked the man at the counter how much it was. He didn't know and seot me to the manager. The manager called up his broker and said. 'How much is IBM selling for today?' The broker told him 212, end so the manager stamped $2.12 on the box.

The New Attitudes Toward Death and Dying

"The awful, terrible act of his dying was, he could see, reduced by those about him to the level of a casual, unpleasant. and almost indecorous incident (as it someone entered a drawing-room diffusing an unpleasant odor)"

-from "The Death of Ivan Hych," by Leo Tolstoy:

By Robert Remhold

DOSTON (NYT).—Death—perhaps the last major American taboo-is beginning to emerge from its dark cloak of fear and denial

Increasingly, Americans are trying to come to grips with and case the inevitability of their mortality. Arnold Toynbee's observation, made only half-facetiously, that death is an "un-American" affront to our "inalienable rights" to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness is slowly giving way in the face of more realistic and open attitudes toward the nitimate fact of Death is never likely to be entirely welcome or free from foreboding Our secular and existential society offers tittle of the spiritual comfort that cushioned the passage of our ancestors from the known to the unknown. What is perhaps feared today more than death is dying, often suffered in loneliness amid strangers and machines in a hospital. Demand is growing for the "right" to die "with dignity" when the time comes.

"We do not see people fighting death the way they used to— this despair at the end," said Sister Annette Caron, head of the Youville Hospital in Cambridge, Mass, a Roman Catholic facility than specializes in caring for the gravely ill.

Breaking a Barrier

What Youville and other similar programs are trying to do is break down the terrible barrier-some would say cruel prejndice_tha: so often isolates the dying from the rest of society. They want to make dying a more humanized and natural part of life, to avoid the desperation of Tolstoy's Ivan Hych, knowing he was dying while everyone around him pretended he wasn't.

The new concern over death, many believe, is fundamentally a reflection of complex changes in the national psyche since the dawn of the nuclear age. Many writers and thinkers are coming to see death, and often the threat of premature death, not as just an enemy of the old and weak hut as a powerful influence over our behavior, both as individuals and as organized cultures. "Death is an intensive part of the human condition," argues Dr. Herman Feifel, a psychologist with the Veterans Administration in Los Angeles, who is one of the early researchers into the meaning of death. Theologians too are giving new attention to the meaning of human mortality and raising old but neglected questions about the very purpose of human existence. With the botton of personal immortality through an afterlife receding, some see a return to a purer, less selfish form of religion stressing faith to God rather than the promise of life after death. This enormous emphasis on immortality was not in Judaism or early Christianity—people use religion for selfish purposes," remarked Krister Stendahl, dean of divinity at Harvard.

Sizns of the new attitudes abound:

· The public appetite for discussion of death has been fed by a huge new crop of books, magazine and Dewspaper articles and television documentaries. By one estimate, publishers are turning out two or three full-length books a week on death, ranging from highly personal accounts of reconciliation with imminent death to specialized technical works for professionals. There have even been a half dozen or so recent children's books on death. "Death is now selling books," observed Publishers Weekly recently.

Leading this grim best-seller list is "On Death and Dying," 2 popular work on dealing with dying patients by Elisabeth Kubler-Ross, a Chicago psychiatrist. With 720,000 copies in print a spokeswoman for the Macmillan Publishing Company called the sales "absolutely phenomenal," particularly on college campuses; a 13th printing has just been ordered.

· The first "hospice" for the dying in the United States will soon be opened to provide a warm, secure place to die amid friends, family and pets when further medical treatment is considered pointless. "We are just awamped—every time anything about us appears in the newspapers the phone rings all week," said Dr. Sylvia Lack, a British physician who is organizing the new facility, called Hospice, Inc., in New Haven, Conn., on the model of similar institutions in London.

· The once-tiny cuthanasia movement is flourishing. The New York-based Ruthanssia Educational Council reports that membership, as measured by the number who gave $3 or more, has risen from 600 to 30,000 in just five years, with 20,000 having joined in the last year alone.

. Thousands of Americans have signed "living wills" to express in advance their wish to be allowed to die when "there. is no reasonable expectation of my recovery from physical or mental disability." Bills in many state legislatures would give them force of law and absolve physicians of liability for obeying them; none has yet passed.

. The Gallup Poll recently reported a marked shift in public acceptance of "mercy killing," even though few organized advocates of euthanesis support it. Pifty-three per cent of those polled answered yes when asked if a doctor should be allowed to induce painless death to the incurable if requested by patient and family: in 1950, only 36 per cent answered yes. dowever, analysis of the poli shows that the main support for inis attitude comes from the young (under 30) and college educated, not from the elderly poor who are much closer to the reality of death and destitution.

· Courses and symposis on death have something of a college fad. A whole new genre of scholars, called "thanatologists" after the Greek word for death, regularly fill several specialized journals with articles on dying, bereavement, suicide, disasters and other death-related topics. The subject has also become an important element of medical school curricula, which oddly enough, have tended to neglect death except in the strictly clinical sense.

· Study and counseling organizations have coalesced in a number of cities and at universities. In New York, the Foundation of Thanatology holds frequent conferences and in Philadelphis a number of physicians, nurses and others have formed the Ars Moriendi, named after 15th-century religious manuals on the art of dving.

. Physicians at the Yale University School of Medicine recently reported that they had allowed 43 severely deformed. infants to die by withholding treatment after parents agreed there was little chance for "meaningful life." What was unusual was not the decision to let the infants die, which is done quietly all the time, but the willingness of the doctors to talk about it in print in the hope of breaking what they call "the public and professional silence on a major social taboo."

Last year's champ, Jamie Wilmot of Sydney finished third in 1:58.22, while Jack Brown of the United States was in second in 1:58. A number of the 241 contending tubs were swamped in the wake of their competitors before making it out of the harbor.

Richard Condie, 76 ended 17 years as director of the Mormon Tabernacie Choir in Salt Lake City Sunday as his 375 cheristers paid him tribute with a festival of favorites ("Let the Sun Shine Through," "Softly Now the Light of Day," etc.). Condie is succeeded by Jay Weich, an assistant director of the choir since 1957.
